Hancock Chapter I students make gains in CAI program

BY TRACI BONNEY
Marie Donald had some good news for the Hancock County School Board at its Monday meeting. Donald, the district's Chapter I coordinator, told the board that students in grades one through six had gained an average of one academic year through the Chapter I Computer-Assisted Instruction program.

Chapter I is designed to help those students who are economically disadvantaged and/or educationally deprived, and whose academic average falls below the 50th percentile. The program gives them a chance to enhance skills in subject areas such as math and reading, allowing the students to raise their knowledge to the proper grade level.

Computer-Assisted Instruction (CAI), designed by Computer Curriculum Corporation (CCC), uses specially designed software to teach students those skills.

Students in all the district's elementary schools made gains, Donald said, although students at Gulfview did not reach CCC's projections for satisfactory gains.

Donald explained that this was because the children at Gulfview simply did not have as much time with the computers as children at the other schools. Given enough time, she said, they would have gained at least a year.

Scianna elected president of Bay St. Louis City Council

BY TRACI BONNEY
Lack of an audience made for a short meeting Thursday night as Charles Scianna was elected president of the Bay St. Louis City Council.

Scianna, a first term councilman, claimed the election was "no big surprise, no upheaval."

He said, "We had agreed we would rotate the officers' positions. I was vice president, so when the election came around, I was moved up to president and James Rutherford was moved to vice president."

Scianna was elected to a full term last July after serving six months of the unexpired term of Lisa Coward, who was elected to the Hancock County Board of Supervisors.

Rutherford was voted in during a special election to fill the position left vacant by Wilmer Seymour, who was also elected to the board of supervisors.

Other business addressed by the board included voting to solicit proposals to design a logo for the City of Bay St. Louis, and approving the June claims docket.

The council scheduled a workshop meeting for July 10, 5:30 p.m.

James Ginn selected for "Who's Who in Mississippi"

tion. He also has served as president of the Bay Sr. High booster club and as drive chairman for the Hancock County Heart Fund.

He is married to Jacqueline J. Ginn and has two children, Deborah Ginn Alford and James Ginn II.

Buccanneer State Park strives to improve handicapped facilities

BY LIZ HAAS
Buccanneer State Park is striving to improve accessibility for handicapped persons.

A policy and grievance committee established by the park in conjunction with the Department of Human Services, had its annual meeting on Thursday, June 28, to discuss plans for bettering facilities for the handicapped.

Committee members include Greg Smith of Buccanneer State Park; Sylvia Hodges Dickinson, vocational rehabilitation counselor for the Department of Human Services; Janice Carver, counselor assistant for the Department of Human Services; Lyman Adams, a quadriplegic with the Independent Living Center; Patrick Theriot, a paraplegic who is employed at Stennis Space Center; and Stuart Favre, a paraplegic who is a senior at St. Stanislaus High School.

The committee members, with the exception of Favre who was not able to attend, met to take a survey of what was needed and what changes needed to be made in the park to make it accessible to the handicapped. The survey will be submitted by Smith to the park's Regional Office in Jackson in order to receive funding for the project.

The park has already been allocated $460,000 in capital improvements by the Mississippi Legislature for improvements to be made to the Wavepool.

Smith said he is not sure of how the money will be used, but it will be for a water related project, perhaps a water slide.

"The Wavepool is in its eleventh year of business and we feel it is time for a change of some type to be made made in order to continue the public's interest in the park," said Smith.

Smith said the attendance at the Wavepool has been better this year than last year because it rained often last summer.

The cost for an all-day pass to the Wavepool is $5.50 for adults and $4.00 for children between three and 12 years. It is open from 11 a.m. to 6:45 p.m. seven days a week.

Smith said the committee found the bath houses built six years ago were fine, but those built 12 years ago were not accessible for the handicapped. It was noted that handicapped signs are also needed.

Janice Carver with the Department of Human Services said the problems areas noted include:

—No handicapped signs;

—No handicapped parking established;

—No handicapped accessibility into some of the showers and bathrooms and —A lack of ramps in needed areas.

Carver said the changes needed would also assist the elderly, who may have difficulty in climbing stair cases.

Carver said, "The changes needed are a mandate from the National Park Service."

The committee's next meeting will be in mid-July.

ON PATROL

HOT WATERMELONS

Investigator Nathan Hoda of the Hancock County Sheriff's Department reported the arrests of Chester A. Prestenbach, 51, and Wayne Prestenbach, 20, both of Necaise Crossing, on charges of grand larceny in the alleged theft of approximately 158 watermelons from a field adjacent to their property.

The two were arrested and charged Tuesday after Wayne Prestenbach was found selling watermelons at the intersection of I-10 and Hwy. 603.

Hoda said Friday, "It has not been proven yet that those were the stolen watermelons, but we believe that they are."

The men were released on $3,000 bond each, Hoda said. He added, "The watermelons were 'green.' They weren't ripe yet."

Deputies Leo Ladner and George Burselson assisted in the arrests.

INTERSTATE REMOVAL OF A CHILD

Investigator Matt Karl of the Hancock County Sheriff's Department reported the arrests in Texas of Cheryl Hobbs, 21, and Dennis Keeler, 22, on charges of the interstate removal of a child by a non-custodial parent following they allegedly took Hobbs's two daughters, 4 years and 18 months old, Thursday and did not return them to their grandmother, Teresa Rowell of Bay St. Louis.

Hobbs and Keeler were staying at the Ashley Manor Motel when the removal occurred, Karl said.

Hobbs and Keeler are incarcerated in Wichita Falls, Texas, while Mississippi authorities await their extradition, he added.

GROWING MARIJUANA

James Varnell of the Hancock County Narcotics Task Force reported the Sunday, July 1, arrests of Gregory R. Liverett, 24, and Patty L. Liverett, 21, of Waveland Manor Apts. C23.

The two were arrested and charged with growing and cultivating marijuana after a search warrant was issued for their apartment.

Both are out on bond, Varnell said. A July 12 hearing has been set.

Assisting the task force in the arrests were Officer Renee Normand, Patrolman Kent Malley and Officer Greg Martin of Waveland Police Department.

Coping with grief

Licensed social worker assists those who have lost loved ones

BY LIZ HAAS

Vivian Tate helps people work through their grief.

The Pass Christian resident, a licensed social worker with a master's degree from Louisiana State University, is employed with Riemann Funeral Home's Bereavement Care Program.

The service provides individual, marital and family counseling related to grief issues for community members.

She said, "I let people know what happens in the grief process and reassure them that what they're going through is normal and to be expected."

Tate finds her work very rewarding and is constantly reminded of reaching the light at the end of the tunnel.

She said, "All persons will experience grief in their lifetimes and need accurate information about what happens and how to help themselves through the grieving process. The main thing people must remember is they should work through their grief and not just try to survive or work over it. This helps to lessen the intensity and frequency as time goes on."

Tate said most people put the grief aside, which may lead to physical and mental illnesses. When a person does not talk about the incident, that only worsens the affects.

In the first meeting, Tate talks with the individual about what has happened and the feelings he or she may be experiencing. She helps the person to recognize the factors that can help and hurt one in moving toward healing the grief.

The amount of time needed to help someone depends on each individual, his or her coping mechanisms and the amount of support he has.

Tate said a person experiences shock and denial upon the death of a loved one and the denial exists all through the process of grief until a person gains reconciliation.

"Reconciliation is when both the head and heart understand the death occurred. The relationship is now one of memory, and the person has the energy to place on other aspects of life," said Tate.

Other feelings during grief are sadness, panic, loneliness, guilt or remorse. Physical symptoms may also exist.

"It's helpful to remember the body needs to be supported through grief. A person must eat healthy and exercise properly," said Tate.

Tate said the Riemann program, the only one of its kind in the area, also offers presentations of educational programs for agencies, organizations, professionals and the community.

Sign vandals strike on county roads

BY JANET MCQUEEN

The Hancock County Road Maintenance Department has recently spent more than $15,000 on signs—signs which are being removed and vandalized at a rapid rate.

Road Maintenance Superintendent Sam Cuevas reported the problem is severe in the Pearlinton area, although no section of the county remains unaffected.

"Someone's life could be jeopardized because of this, as emergency vehicles must rely on these signs to find a victim's home," said Cuevas.

The county is in the process of replacing every street sign in conjunction with the 911-emergency dialing project. Many county roads were renamed during the past year.

Signs are not stolen as much as vandalized, according to Cuevas, who said the signs—still attached to the poles—are being found in the woods.

"We can put them back up whenever we find them," he said. Anyone with information about persons stealing or vandalizing signs should contact the Hancock County Sheriff's Department, according to Cuevas.

SHOPPING UP A STORM

By Katie McGuire Caire

Hungry for a tasty steak or a juicy beef roast, with "all the fix-ins" also? Well, you're in luck, for there's a beef bonanza in a number of beef cuts at our area supermarkets, from boneless top sirloin or chuck steak, to boneless rump roast or center cut, and bone-in chuck roast, with other assorted choices at good prices in between.

If you cook a roast, you'll cut your kitchen time on subsequent days, depending, of course, upon the size of the roast which you choose, and the number of appetites you must satisfy.

When I cook a boneless rump roast, for instance, I "plan ahead" to serve:

CECE'S COLD ROAST BEEF WITH CAPER VINAIGRETTE
(This quick and easy, and ever so tasty recipe was developed by CeCe Sullivan, home economist on the staff of the Seattle Times.)

3 Tbsp. fresh lemon juice
2 tsp. country-style Dijon mustard
1/4 cup olive oil
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
2 Tbsp. drained capers
1 lb. thinly sliced roast beef
7 slices French bread, approximately 1/2-inch thick

Whisk together the lemon juice and mustard. Slowly add the olive oil and whisk until smooth and blended. Stir in the pepper and capers.

Drizzle a little of the vinaigrette over the beef. Toast the bread on both sides under a hot broiler.

To serve: Lay slices of the roast beef on the bread and drizzle with the remaining vinaigrette. (Four servings)

If you don't have a pound of roast beef left over, "not to worry"—julienne a few slices of roast beef, and add to a green salad, along with sliced, boiled potatoes, perhaps, and tomatoes and onions and such to turn a green salad into a hearty main dish salad.

And, of course, there's roast beef hash, and hot roast beef po-boys, and beef with barbecue sauce and beef pot pie; so, do as I do, "buy big" and use it all up in tasty ways!

If your choice is chuck steak, try this:

BUDGETEER'S GRILLED CHUCK STEAK
1/4 cup vinegar
2 Tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
2 Tbsp. corn oil
1 1/2 tsp. unseasoned meat tenderizer
1/8 to 1/4 tsp. marjoram (optional)
1/8 to 1/4 tsp. rosemary (optional)
1/8 to 1/4 tsp. thyme (optional)
3 lbs. chuck steak, cut 1 1/2 inches thick

One hour before serving, combine vinegar, Worcestershire, oil, meat tenderizer and herbs. Pierce steak on all sides with pronged fork. Pour vinegar mixture over steak and refrigerate, turning once or twice.

Grill or broil 8 to 12 minutes on each side, basting with vinegar mixture occasionally. To serve, carve into thin slices. (Flank steak may be used in place of chuck steak; score flank steak to keep it flat while cooking. Grill close to heat 5 minutes per side, and carve in thin slices, cutting diagonally across grain.)

You may use an all-purpose seasoning instead of those called for, but the marjoram and rosemary and thyme add so much to the taste!—from Fabulous Meats cookbook by Johna Blinn, syndicated food columnist.)

And, if you yearn for a more "pricey" cut, just stop for a moment and figure the servings per cut of meat instead of the servings per pound—sometimes you'll be surprised! Or, cut the higher-priced steaks into strips or chunks and stretch the servings by incorporating the meat into a rice or pasta dish and so on. Steak strips with rice and almonds and mushrooms is one of my favorite dishes, and it surely stretches a smaller amount of beef!

Bone-in pork steaks are another good buy in the meat department, as are ham shanks. And in the chicken category, fryer breast are specially priced as are drumsticks.

Other good buys this week: tomatoes, of course, in plentiful supply along with yellow onions, mushrooms and broccoli. And, in the fruit bins, watermelons and canteloupes, seedless white grapes, peaches and nectarines. Enjoy.

Easy quiche designed for kids

These days, you'll find lots of kids in the kitchen preparing meals. As moms and dads' lives become more hectic, they're turning to their children to help out with the cooking. (One benefit is that kids often prefer their own creations!)

Add Shelly's Quiche to your juvenile recipe file. It's a super-simple brunch or dinner dish that tastes just yummy!

This easy version uses bread slices in place of pastry to form a crust—saving time and effort and cutting the fat content. Added to the standard egg filling are turkey, cheese and carrots, all readily available, kid-pleasing ingredients.

When kids cook with eggs, moms can be assured of good nutrition. That's because eggs are classified with meat in the food categories. One egg equals one ounce of lean meat, fish or poultry. An egg yolk is one of the few foods which contain vitamin D, the sunshine vitamin.

SHELLY'S QUICHE

6 slices whole wheat bread, cut in half diagonally
1 cup (4 oz.) chopped turkey
1 cup (4 oz.) shredded American cheese
1/2 cup shredded carrots
6 eggs
1 cup low-fat milk
1/2 teaspoon dill weed
Set the oven to 375° F.
Cut the bread crusts off. You won't need them. Cut each bread slice in half diagonally to make two triangles. Press some of the bread triangles all around the sides of a lightly greased 9-inch pie plate.

Use the corners of the bread to make a jagged edge. Press the rest of the bread over the bottom of the pie plate. (It's okay if the pieces don't fit together exactly.) Bake 5 minutes. Take out of the oven.

Sprinkle the turkey, cheese and carrots into the bread shell.

With a fork, beat the eggs, milk and dill weed in a medium bowl until well mixed. Pour the egg mixture over the ingredients in the bread shell.

Bake about 40 minutes. Pull out the oven rack with the quiche on it and insert a knife into the quiche halfway between the middle and the edge. If the knife comes out looking clean, the quiche is done. If it's not done, bake it about 5 to 10 minutes longer. Let it stand 5 minutes out of the oven before serving.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

On Tuesday, July 10, from 1 to 4 p.m. a procurement workshop will be held in the Mississippi Power Company's auditorium, US-90 at Dunbar Avenue, Bay St. Louis.

Skip Ryland, director of the Mississippi Procurement Center in Gulfport is scheduled to conduct the workshop.

The workshop is sponsored by the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce, and Ryland was last month's Morning Edition speaker. The workshop will give an opportunity to folks to find out more about securing federal government contracts.

The Mississippi Procurement Center is now operating throughout the state, having started about five or so years ago on the Coast.

The organization has helped many small businesses get on the right track in securing government contracts.

As many of you know, the federal government is the largest employer in the State of Mississippi.

The government's business is up for grabs, and either we Mississippians try and get it, or for sure someone from another state will.

For further information call Libby Roland, chamber executive director at 467-9048.

Balanced Budget Amendment forced to a vote in House

Balanced Budget legislation has been bottled up in the Judiciary Committee for years while the federal government has borrowed enough money to put each American household $30,000 in debt.

In a rare legislative move recently, I joined with 217 other Democrat and Republican members of the House of Representatives to force to a vote legislation that might begin to control our nation's horrible spending practices.

We collected enough signatures on a petition to remove the legislation from committee and take it to the floor of the House. These "discharge petitions" are rarely successful because they require 218 signatures—or a majority of the House.

Conservative Reps. Charlie Stenholm (D-Texas) and Larry Craig (R-Idaho) powered the petition drive. The bipartisan effort in the House and public concern over the deficit are two reasons the petition was so successful. Stenholm says that public support of the Balanced Budget Amendment has never been greater. And it is easy to understand why.

Not one penny of the debt is going toward educating our children, paving our highways or curing the country's illnesses. People are tired of spending practices that produce little in return. They recognize the threat posed to family living standards and to our nation as we know it.

A floor vote on the Balanced Budget Amendment could come by next week and no later than the end of the summer. The amendment must pass by a two-thirds majority in the House and Senate and then be ratified by three-fourths of the states.

Legislative mandates that have required balanced budgets in the past haven't always been successful, but I believe this amendment is necessary.

The amendment would require the President and the Congress to agree on a single budget estimate. Beginning in 1993 the President would have to propose and the Congress adopt a balanced budget, unless 3/5 of both Houses, agree in a roll call vote to unbalance it.

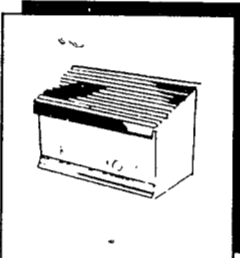

Obviously, the Balanced Budget Amendment is only one way that Congress can begin to control the deficit. I've proposed legislation that would force through federal statute the President to submit a balanced budget to Congress.

We need also to begin living within our means, limiting the amounts of foreign aid we are appropriating and start concentrating on curbing our own country's debt.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Flag burning amendment to Constitution needed

Dear Editor,

I agree with Nicholas Haas Jr. when he states, "The United States takes no political prisoners."

But I do not think the desecration of our flag is a political statement. To me, it is the work of someone who hates our country, or who is a low-down jerk who likes to see himself on TV. Jail is too good for those who have no respect for our flag or the country they live in.

If it was left up to me, I would tie them to a post and give them a good old-fashioned horse whipping.

I am sure there are plenty of patriotic people left who would volunteer for this job.

When it was necessary, our Constitution has been amended several times in the past.

Years ago, we did not have people who did such terrible things as they do today. The Democrats and Republicans in Washington should work together on the flag burning issue, amend the Constitution, and protect "the emblem of the land I love, the home of the free and the brave." God bless America.

Respectfully,
Nina S. Garcia

A vote against lottery is vote for business

Dear Editor:

Every business person should realize that the lottery is a negative for the economy of our state. Money that goes for lottery tickets comes out of business income.

Holiday Quality Foods in California presented a prime example of this economic reality. In 1986 they ran advertisements in many California newspapers that said, "Don't Gamble with Food!"

The ad went on to say, and I quote, "Since the California State Lottery Program started in October, we have sold in excess of one million dollars worth of lottery tickets. Our food business during this period of time has declined the same amount. Morally, we feel it is wrong for us to offer our customers the opportunity to gamble with their food dollars and, therefore, we will no longer be selling California State Lottery tickets. Thank you for your understanding. Holiday Quality Foods."

When you are willing to look at facts rather than hype, you can see that a state lottery is unsound for business. The twenty-three Senators who voted against the lottery voted for business!

Peace dividend should go to American taxpayer

The dramatic movements in recent months toward greater political and economic freedom in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union may down the road permit the preservation of our nation's security at a cost less than current budget projections.

This prospect for a so-called peace dividend has produced a head-long rush in Washington to spend this anticipated windfall by creating a raft of new entitlement programs.

I remain skeptical that a peace dividend will materialize in the near future. But when it happens, I intend to make certain that my colleagues in the Congress are mindful that dividends normally are paid to investors, not kept by the corporation.

If there is a peace dividend, it should be returned to taxpayers in ways that address the problems faced by ordinary Americans, and not kept in Washington to finance a Congressional spending spree.

The changes in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union are a direct result of the American taxpayer's willingness and determination to pay the price for the advancement of freedom throughout the world.

THE PEOPLE'S BUSINESS

From the Mississippi Economic Council

Tort Reform work remains to be done

A recent survey by a nationally recognized research firm reminds that the American civil justice system may be in need of additional fine tuning.

Nationwide, the system had undergone major changes in recent years. At the state level, the Mississippi Legislature in 1988 and 1989 made significant revisions in the system under a strong "tort reform" campaign sponsored by business groups.

The tort reforms were needed, business argued successfully, because businesses in Mississippi were at a competitive disadvantage. The civil justice playing field has been leveled to a large degree, thanks to the successful tort reform effort; and the lack of tort reform no longer puts Mississippi at an economic development disadvantage.

A recent survey by the nationally recognized Conference Board, however, suggests the need for additional review and reform.

In that survey the Conference Board found that 47 percent of the business firms responding to the survey had discontinued at least one product line because of concerns about liability insurance.

An interesting comparison—a survey of businesses in this state two years ago by the Mississippi Economic Council found that the same percentage of businesses, 47 percent, had made decisions adversely affecting their own economic growth because of the lack of tort reforms. Some of those decisions involved elimination of product lines.

The same Wall Street Journal report of the Conference Board survey said there are 30 times as many lawsuits per capita in the United States as in Japan.

The conclusion to be drawn from the survey and the report seems obvious: there is still work to be done in the reform of the civil justice system—both in Mississippi and across the country.

ope and the Soviet Union also are a direct result of the total inability of socialist economies to compete with free-market economies.

We should heed this lesson and redirect resources from the federal government to the family which we know to be the key stone of the ability of Western democracies to promote growth and opportunity. In that way the peace dividend can be used to effectively meet individual needs of health, education, and training.

These savings could be returned in the form of measures such as a refundable child care tax credit, repeal of the Social Security earnings test, an increase in the personal exemption, expansion of a permanent research and development tax credit, a long term capital gains tax cut, and further lowering of marginal tax rates.

Only by returning this savings to American families to invest in their futures and America's future can we assure that the peace dividend will be wisely invested. Meeting individual needs through stronger families is superior to attempts to meet individual needs through bigger government.

Only once in America's history has a peace dividend not been returned to the American people in the form of a smaller federal government. The $380 billion post Vietnam peace dividend was spent entirely on increased domestic spending and bigger government.

That government spending reduced rather than increased our nation's economic prospects and our government's fiscal health. During 1970 to 1977, inflation rose from 5.6 percent to 6.7 percent, unemployment grew from 4.8 percent to 6.9 percent, real economic growth slowed to an average of 2.5 percent, and the federal budget deficit grew from $2.8 billion to $53.6 billion.

By its failure in terms of growth, inflation, poverty, employment, and government finance, America's experiment with unlimited government in the 1970s parallels the failure of the socialist systems in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Will Congress use the 1990s peace dividend to expand jobs, opportunity, and economic growth in America? Or will it attempt the failed path of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union by expanding government and bureaucracy?

The true lesson of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union is the failure of government-dominated economies to provide an adequate standard of living or anything comparable to the quality of life available in free-market economies.

Tax incentives and tax cuts will create more jobs, make America more competitive, permit increased allowances for families to meet child care and other needs, and provide for more secure retirement.

Meeting individual needs by redirecting resources to families is far superior to attempts to meet individual needs through bigger government.

Reflections

On Life

By Father Jerome
LeDoux, SVD

This is my body

Ever jealous of the only time of the day which he could call his own, the overworked priest just walked in from morning Mass when the rectory doorbell began to ding, ding, ding.

Already annoyed that the bell should be ringing during his prized time at 7 a.m., his level of irritation rose even higher as the dinging resumed before he could turn to open the door.

With some of the rougher psalms of David ringing in his ears together with the dinging, he reached out roughly for the knob, only to have his hand freeze in midair, stayed by the sudden, jolting memory of the Mass which he had just celebrated.

"This is my Body," flushed through his mind. The words had never truly meant that before, certainly not in all their implications. But here it was now in all reality: "This is my Body."

Shocked by the sudden revelation of meaning, dismayed by his own mindless lack of perception, and shamed by his callous disregard for the Body of Christ outside the Mass, he turned the knob and greeted his early morning visitor.

"Father, could I trouble you for a sandwich?" the visitor asked after a quick exchange of greetings.

"And would you like a cup of hot coffee with that?" the priest asked in a dramatic turnabout by which he surprised himself.

"Oh yes, Father! That would be wonderful!" came the very delighted, grateful response. Wonderful and dramatic indeed it was. The Body of Christ, never before seen in that perspective, never before said with such a powerful meaning for Father Michael Jamail who tells this story on himself with great feeling and meaning.

"This is my Body" is so much part and parcel of each human being's everyday life that to leave it at the altar in church is to miss its meaning and power entirely.

Paul reminds us: "Just as each of us has one body with many members, and not all the members have the same function, so too we, though many, are one Body in Christ and individually members of one another" (Rom. 12: 4-5).

Although Paul was addressing the Christians directly when he wrote those words, Jesus had already extended the unity of his Body to every human being by identifying himself with each sister and each brother everywhere in the world.

"This is my Body" is not just a pious religious formula which takes our imagination back to the Lord's Supper on that first Holy Thursday.

Rather, it is a reality which takes Holy Thursday and puts it on every street, in every home and especially in the person of each human being.

No wonder the Mass is so sterile, boring and meaningless for so many people! It is bound to be an empty and barren exercise in ritual for all who approach it without the conviction that "This is my Body" means every person everywhere on earth.

Equally, it is a bummer for all who leave Mass without immediately trying to identify "This is my Body" in each person outside.

When Jesus offered himself on Calvary, he did it with such a loving bond with all and each of us that he made the humanly crazy statement that we are his Body through our love of each other.

"This is my Body" rushes in upon us anytime we encounter any sister or brother of any nation, of any race, of any condition, of any reputation, of any character or personality.

As Jesus did, we accept each person fully whether out of the penthouse or gutter.

Renowned writer, actress featured at Gulfside Assembly

Young people in grades 7-12 attending the annual youth program at Gulfside Assembly July 8-July 19, are in for a treat.

They will experience the knowledge, talent and skills of two prominent artists in residence. The program theme is "Giving Back: How does one give back to God?"

Brenda Wilkinson, a writer of children's books, is best known for her Ludell series, a trilogy of a young girl growing up in the rural South during pre-civil rights era.

She is the second of eight children who grew up in Waycross, Ga., "not having everything they wanted, but all that they needed, with no television and the Bible, the only book available."

She finds that she can remember everything that happened around her, and she likes to preserve these different voices and dialects in her writing.

"It's a way of saying to young people, you don't have to be exactly like everyone else," she said.

She attended Hunter College in New York City and had her first short story published in an anthology by poet, Sonia Sanchez.

Her novel, Ludell, was the 1976 nominee for the National Book Award for children's books and was selected by school library journals as one of the best children's books of 1975.

Ludell and Willie was named a 1977 best book for young adults by the American Library Association.

Ludell's New York Times, published in 1980 was on the American Library Association book list. She now lives in New York City with her two daughters, Lorie and Kim. She will be available the week of July 8.

Billie Jean Young is a poet, actress and activist, who also holds a law degree.

She organized the Southern Rural Women's Network Mississippi and was its first director. She has been involved in theatre for the past 20 years.

In 1983 she wrote and directed a one-woman show, "This Little Light," based on the life of Fannie Lou Hamer. It has been performed in 27 states, Central America and the Caribbean.

The performance has been taped and placed in the archives of the Smithsonian National Museum of American History. In 1986, she was recipient of the MacArthur Genius Award.

Young was included as one of the "Black Women who have made a Difference" in Essence magazine, May 1990. She will be available the week of July 15 and will do drama workshop.

The states, "Children in theatre change. They become assertive and more disciplined."

Young, a native of Alabama, is presently living in Jackson.

Both women are committed to "giving back" to young people some of the blessings they have received.

It is not too late to register for the program. The cost is $103 per week. Scholarships are available.

Meets Quayle

Lisa Church Owens, a 1983 graduate of Our Lady Academy who presently resides in Washington, D.C., met Vice-President Dan Quayle at a barbecue at the White House following "Run for the Cure," a race to raise funds for the fight against cancer. Military training equipment expo hosted by Guard

The Mississippi National Guard will host a military training and equipment expo on July 14 at Camp Shelby on Hwy. 49 south of Hattiesburg.

GuardFest commemorates the 50th anniversary of the World War II mobilization of the Mississippi National Guard. All 3,500 men of the Guard were federalized during the period 1940-1941, seeing action in either Europe, North Africa or the Pacific. The famed 31st Infantry "Dixie" Division, made up of Mississippi and Alabama soldiers, received numerous combat citations serving in the Pacific theater.

GuardFest '90 offers Mississippians a chance to see the state-of-the-art equipment used by the Army and Air Guard, such as the C-141 "Starlifter" and the M-1 "Abrams" tank.

The festival is free and open to the public.

The five-hour show begins at 10 a.m. at the Camp Shelby Parade Field with displays, ranging from tracked vehicles such as tanks and howitzers, to helicopters, from the AH-1 Cobra to the CH-54 Skycrane, a giant heavy lift helicopter capable of lifting up to 20,000 pounds.

Other displays include a field medical complex, vintage World War II vehicles, a Special Forces weapon display, the Bradley Fighting Vehicle and numerous other high-tech vehicles and weapons.

At noon, the demonstrations begin with a free-fall parachuting exercise, with the paratroopers jumping from a UH-1 Huey helicopter at 10,000 feet. Following the jump, Meridian Air Guard RF-4 "Phantom" jets will make numerous passes over the parade field. These supersonic jets are capable of flying at Mach 2 and are designed for long range reconnaissance missions.

The Jackson Air Guard will perform a flyover of the C-141 "Starlifter" cargo jet.

Other demonstrations include a rappelling exercise, using Huey helicopters; a Skycrane sling-load demonstration; F-16 "Fighting Falcon" fighter jet flyover; a Civil War artillery demonstration; and a medical evaluation demonstration.

The National Guard's 41st Army Band will perform.

A popular attraction for children is the camouflaging booth, where kids can get their faces painted with water-based camouflage colors.

A special reception will be held for the National Guard veterans at the Armed Forces Museum from 2 to 4 p.m.

Canine enforcement officer demonstrates program

Joe Valencic, chief canine enforcement officer for the United States Customs Service, South Central Region, New Orleans, and his dog Bentley (a very large, well-fed, black lab) will be at Waveland Elementary School at 9:30 a.m. and at the Middle School in Bay St. Louis at approximately noon.

Joe and Bentley give an informative and entertaining demonstration on how the Customs Service utilizes these wonderful dogs to help them in their war on drugs.

The dogs and customs officers are an integral part of the "Just Say No" program.

The dogs are used on ships, airplanes, warehouses, etc., all of the places that would take humans hours and perhaps days to search thoroughly.

The public is invited.

Tennis time

Brother Pascal has taught free lessons to local children for almost two decades

From Staff Reports

One of the aspects which makes our community a special place to live is the tireless dedication to our young people. Many unselfish individuals give of their time and talents without expecting anything in return.

Brother Pascal

In spite of one plastic and one stainless steel hip, Brother Pascal Ackerman of St. Stanislaus has given tennis instruction for the past 17 years to children ranging in age from 6 to 14 years.

Youngsters arrive at the SSC tennis courts at 8 a.m. and are kindly greeted by Bro. Pascal, along with some helpers provided by the Parks and Playgrounds Commission.

"But Bro. Pascal, I don't have a racket," exclaims one boy.

"No problem, I have an extra one that you can use," is always the reply from Bro. Pascal.

On this one particular summer morning last week, about 40 boys and girls came to receive an hour of instruction. Helping Bro. Pascal was Myron Labat Jr. and Susan Estrade.

In the first half-hour before their water break, Bro. Pascal's group of about ten players learned and improved their forehand, backhand, and overhand tennis skills.

Bro. Pascal clearly enjoys teaching each of the youngsters. He is a man in constant motion, always issuing praise when something good is done, and correcting any flaws he spots in a young athlete's game.

Everyone on the tennis court is kept busy learning how to play tennis. No one idly stands around doing nothing.

"Bro. Pascal runs a very good tennis program," states George Proulx, president of the Parks and Playgrounds Commission.

"He reaches a lot of kids and puts his whole heart into the program. Along with Bro. Canisius, they both have done so much over the years to help so many youngsters."

The Parks and Playgrounds provides assistance to the program by providing some of the helpers and equipment needed to run an efficient operation.

Bro. Pascal took his vows as a Brother of the Sacred Heart in 1925 and looks forward to each day with a cheerful, enthusiastic attitude.

"I thank the good Lord for all he has given me, and Jesus has given us the perfect example of how to serve others," said Bro. Pascal.

Know the soil you build on to avoid costly mistake

By Linda McMahon
District Conservationist

A house or a lot on which you plan to build is a big investment. You can't afford to make mistakes. But unsuspected soil hazards can cause serious damage and lead to major expense.

A soil survey available from the Soil Conservation Service can help you answer the following questions about your home-site before you build or buy:

1) Is Flooding a Hazard?

Many areas now used for houses were used for farms, woodlots and pastures just a few years ago. Some of these areas are on the flood plain of a stream.

The stream may overflow only once in five or 10 years, but the chance of eventual damage is high and may get higher as development takes place in the up-stream area.

Many people do not realize that even a small creek or stream can become a raging, destructive torrent following prolonged or heavy rains.

In many parts of the country, homes whose homes have been severely damaged by floods are not aware that their home-sites are built on a flood plain. Because about 5 percent of the land in the United States is on flood plains and much of this land is level and seemingly good for homebuilding, a prospective homebuyer should know whether flooding is a hazard. Soil surveys indicate the hazard of flooding for the home.

2) Are There Other Sources of Water Damage?

ces of Water Damage?

A seasonally high water table is a hazard in many areas. The water table may be at a safe depth most of the year, but rise during the wet season.

If the water table rises close to the surface, basements may be flooded, septic tank absorption fields may fail, and plants may be damaged or killed. Unfortunately, you can not tell about the water table just by walking over the site.

Soil surveys indicate whether soils have a seasonally high water table and give the depth to the water table. These sites are also the potential wetlands, which must be considered before building.

3) Will the House Settle Unevenly or the Walls Crack?

If your house is built on certain kinds of clayey soils, the foundation may shift or settle unevenly, and walls, plaster and foundation may crack severely.

tion between steep slopes and erosion caused by rapid runoff of rainwater. But even on less sloping area, erosion is a hazard if grass and other plants do not grow well enough to protect the soil.

Erosion may also be caused by water that flows onto your property from higher areas. Such run-in water may deposit sediment in your yard or driveway, wash out shrubs and vegetation, flood your basement or lawn and cause gullies.

Soil surveys describe soil properties that determine the erodibility of each kind of soil mapped.

5) Is the Soil Deep enough?

Because trees, shrubs, grass and flowers grow poorly on most shallow soils, it may be necessary to buy expensive topsoil or use other aids to grow vegetation.

Soil surveys indicate areas where bedrock is at depths of less than 5 to 6 feet. They also described soil properties that affect growth of plants used for landscaping.

6) Are All Soils More or Less the Same?

Soil scientists have identified tens of thousands of different kinds of soil. Most soils consist of two or three distinct layers.

The physical and chemical properties of each of the layers and the great number of combinations of properties explains why there are so many kinds of soil. The average homebuyer does not need to know about all the soils, just about the ones his house is on.

Homeowners who are aware of major soil hazards can take steps to prevent damage rather than incur the likely expense of repairing it.

Soil surveys of counties throughout the United States are published by the Soil Conservation Service in cooperation with state and other federal agencies. Each survey has maps that show the location of each kind of soil in the survey area.

The soils are described and their limitations for many uses are rated. By identifying the soil area, you can determine what hazards, if any, may affect the site.

To obtain a soil survey of Hancock, contact the Soil Conservation Service office in Kiln or phone 255-3225.

Some clayey soils expand as they absorb water and shrink as they dry. This shrinking and swelling can move a house several inches up and down. Unless the foundation is designed for such stress, it is likely to crack.

Soil surveys tell whether the soils are organic or mineral. They also give the amount of sand, silt and clay in each mineral soil and rate the shrinking and swelling potential of clayey soils.

4) Is Erosion a Hazard?

Generally there is a correlation

Grass looks greener from the other side

By Dr. Milo Burnham
Horticulturist
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

Emotion can run high when it comes to the subject of lawn grass. How do I know?

A neighbor recently walking by my home stopped to say, "I hate your lawn and I'm going to spray it with herbicide to kill it."

Now I know he didn't mean that. What I believe he was actually saying was, "Your lawn looks good and mine looks bad and I wish mine looked more like yours."

I'm not one of those "let nature be" people whose lawn area is an accumulation of everything vigorous enough to survive. I hold the premise that a well-manicured, green lawn sets off a home.

Mulch beds and ground covers are fine in moderation, but there is something special about a good-looking lawn. For the past 20 years, I've worked, though not always successfully, at having an attractive lawn.

In the early years I wanted a green lawn 12 months of the year. So one New Year's Day, following a joyous evening at Howard Weliver's, I spray painted the lawn green. The color, as it turned out, wasn't exactly grass green. Today it would be called teal.

From the first of January through the greening-up period in April and until the bermudagrass took over, I had a teal-green lawn. Believe me, once was enough and the lawn hasn't been painted since.

The desire for a green, winter lawn led to the lawn being overseeded with perennial rye grass in early October several years ago. It worked just as it was supposed to, and in January, February, March and April the lawn stood out like a green oasis in a sea of brown (the neighbors' lawns).

Memories of trying to crank a lawn mower with cold-thickened oil in February still haunt me. They put an end to any future

My hopes of achieving the picture-perfect lawn aren't to be realized. I know now that I'm just willing to do it all or do all of it right, and settle for something less than perfect.

For instance, I have two blades for my mower—one on the mower and the "sharpened" one in reserve. The problem is they're both dull, and the lawn has a brownish tinge resulting from the ragged edges of the torn, rather than clean-cut, leaf blades.

Dogs and grass aren't thoughts of overseeding and green, winter lawns.

Efforts to have a picture-perfect, manicured lawn can eat up time. It's not easy no matter how you approach the task, but it isn't all hard work. Pulling a little crabgrass or goosegrass by hand might be considered a waste of time, but it can also be a relaxing kind of therapy that allows the mind to wander while the hands continue to work.

There are chemicals to take care of major weed problems, but if you're going to pull crabgrass, do it in the front yard. That way you get to visit with the neighbors as they walk or jog by. Those in cars honk or wave.
